

CYBERSEX

EROTICA + TECHNOLOGY + DESIGN

DECEMBER 2019

PLUS

How to Have a
Threesome

THE PSEUDOSCIENCE OF SEX ADDICTION

Despite All the Media Hysteria, Sex Addiction Simply Doesn't Exist.

The 2019 Cybersex Survey

WARNING!
ADULT CONTENT
NOT FOR MINORS

In this issue...

Page 02: Letter from the (New) Editor

Page 04: An Orgasm a Day

Page 07: Kink Shaming... Yourself

Page 09: Miss December: DianaPrincessX

Page 13: The 2019 Cybersex Survey Results

Page 17: Opal Star

Page 20: Masters of Dance

Page 25: Player1's Guide to Women

Page 29: Escort of the Month: PansexualPixie

Page 32: Builder Profile: LadyAlexa

Page 40: The Pseudoscience of Sex Addiction

Page 42: How to Have a Threesome

WARNING! ADULT CONTENT. NOT FOR MINORS. DO NOT READ THIS MAGAZINE IF YOU ARE UNDERAGE, OFFENDED BY ADULT CONTENT, OR IF SUCH CONTENT IS ILLEGAL IN YOUR LOCATION.

All information contained in this magazine is for entertainment and information purposes only. Cybersex Magazine assumes no liability or responsibility for any inaccurate, delayed or incomplete information, nor for any actions taken in reliance thereon. The opinions expressed in each article are the opinions of the author and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of Cybersex Magazine. Therefore, Cybersex Magazine carries no responsibility for the opinions expressed.

A Letter From the (New) Editor

By CrimsonMandy

Greetings, 3DX Chat Friends, and welcome to the latest issue of Cybersex Magazine!

This month, we have interesting, informative, and even controversial articles in store. There's an interview with a crazy-talented builder (whom I, myself, idolize), a very informative article on threesomes, a thought-provoking piece on kink shaming (yourself), an interview with (in my opinion) 3DX's top dance troupe, a wonderful chat with a 3DX escort who is a total sweetheart, thoughts written from the viewpoint of a 3DX "player" (as in a self-styled "ladies' man"), our 2019 survey results, a guided tour through a fantastic spaceship room that must be seen to be believed, and more. But, as this is my first issue as Editor, I felt that I should preface the articles that follow with a little letter.

When I started helping out editing articles for the magazine, I did not plan on this being the route things would take. I edit legal documents for a living in the (mostly boring) real world, so I volunteered to do this for fun. Now, however, it's taken on a life of its own, and I sincerely couldn't be happier.

I've only been a part of the 3DX world for a few months, but it never ceases to amaze me. There's such genuinely interesting people that play this silly game we all love. When I started playing, I fully thought it would be just a fun sex simulator. And, it is, I suppose. But, there's more to it, if you bother to look. There's people just like me (or you), who want to make connections, friends, and even develop something that goes beyond the digital realm. I had no idea that, when I joined, I would actually come to find people I consider true friends, or for whom I have developed actual feelings. It all makes sense to me now, though.

This is an open community, where people can interact, and where the driving "force" behind the premise is a mutual love for sex. It's tailor-made for people with matching interests to meet.

Yes, there's a "dark side" to it, as well. This is life, and there's bad eggs out there. But, they really do seem to be the minority. Mostly, it's just us, and our fantastic experiences as we do our best to be the most ideal version of ourselves that we can be. Whether you play the game as yourself, as the person you wish that you were, or as the person you hope to be some day, there's acceptance, fun, and even love waiting just around the corner.

From the "anonymity" of being able to explore the fantasies each of us have only dreamed of (and can't/won't explore in the real world), to the intimacy of being able to communicate and connect, it really is a beautiful, amazing, crazy mess of a place.

And, I absolutely love every minute of it! ♥

CrimsonMandy

A woman with long blonde hair, wearing a red dress, is shown from the waist up. She is looking upwards and to the right with a slight smile. The background is a solid red color. A small icon of a red lip is positioned above the word 'SWINGSET'.

The biggest orgy
in 3DX!

SWINGSET

3 Weekly Events - 700Members - 30 Locations

An Orgasm a Day

The medical benefits of cybersex.

By Brianne

There are a lot of ways to have an orgasm. That wonderful, intense sensation can come vaginally, orally or anally. It can come through masturbation with either your fingertips, hand or toys. And of course it can come through the enjoyment of pornography and cybersex.

And, to your brain and body, it doesn't matter what you do to get off. Orgasms have a range of surprising, highly positive impacts on everything from our psychology to our fat cells, and cybersex can most definitely be part of a long, happy and healthy life.

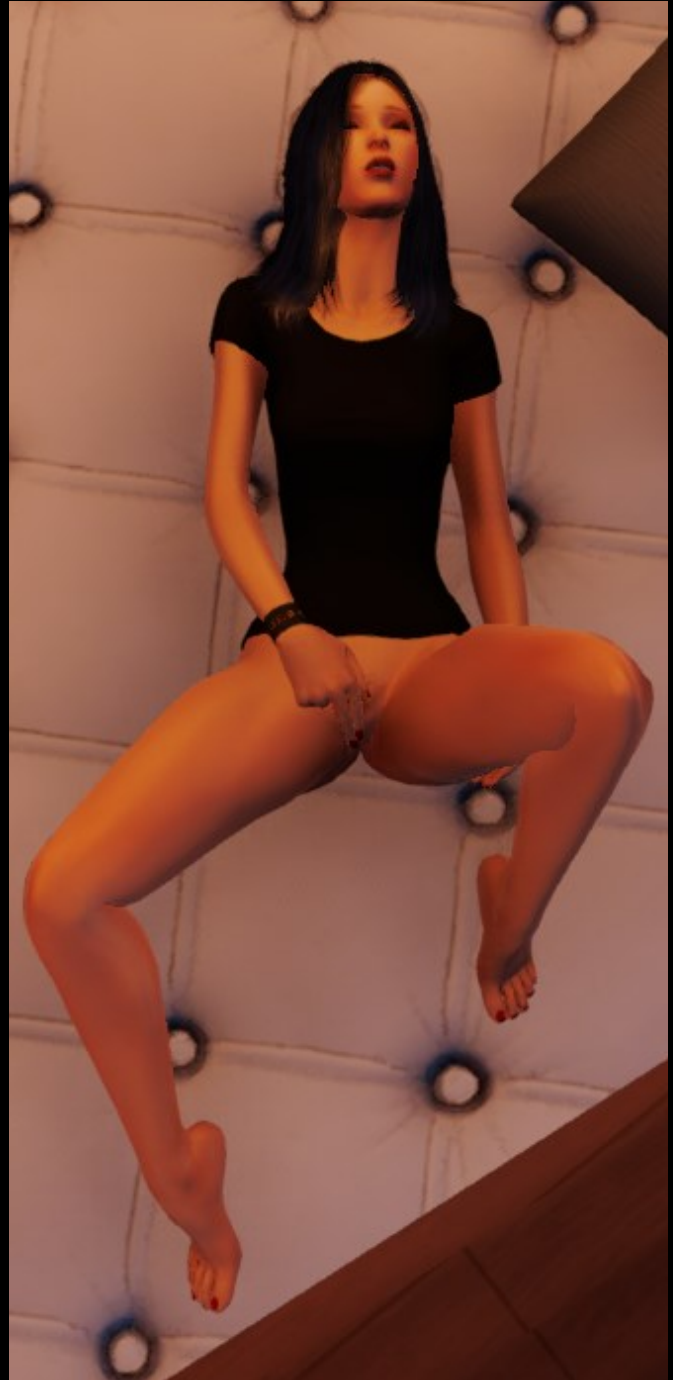

To start with, there is no safer sex than cybersex. No possibility of unwanted pregnancies, sexually transmitted diseases, sexual assault or mishaps. Cybersex also is great for removing barriers to orgasmic sexual encounters such as shyness, physical disabilities, age, money or living in a lightly populated area.

Because of cybersex, more people than ever before can have regular, intense orgasms, and thus enjoy the wonderful health benefits they have to offer.

But what exactly are those benefits? I'm glad you asked...

Orgasms Boost Your Immune System

Forget vitamin C. Orgasms are the best way to prevent the common cold. Multiple international studies by respected medical universities have conclusively shown that having an orgasm temporarily boosts your immune system. And when it comes to cybersex specifically, a 2016 Italian study showed that both male and female college students who engaged in cybersex twice per week had an immunoglobulin level 30% higher than those who were abstinent—a level identical to those who had had real sex twice per week, and almost double that of those who reached orgasm twice per week through masturbating to conventional pornography.

Orgasms Help Regulate Your Cycle

A 2007 report by Planned Parenthood showed that several studies have linked regular orgasms—meaning once or twice per non-menstruating week—to more regular periods, along with relief from menstrual cramps at that time of the month. The effects seemed to be identical between those women who achieved orgasm with a partner, or through masturbation.

Orgasms Make You Feel Happier

No surprises there, though it's always nice to have a little scientific research to back up what you already knew. People who regularly have cybersex are happier, according to a study in the Journal of Psychosomatic Research.

Researchers looked at 400 college aged women, monitoring their mood, sexuality, and menstrual cycle, and found strong links between “simulated sexual intercourse” and an overall sense of well-being.

Orgasms Help You Lose Weight

A study published in the Journal of Sex & Marital Therapy showed that frequent intercourse and sexual activity, whether with a partner or solo, has been connected to a smaller hip and waist circumference for both men and women. That means that cybersex can help lower your risk for serious health issues like heart disease and type 2 diabetes.

Orgasms Increase Your Pain Threshold

According to Dr. Beverly Whipple, author of The G Spot and Other Discoveries About Human Sexuality, having an orgasm produces a pain-blocking affect, so the next time you stub your toe, cut yourself shaving or get a tattoo, it won't hurt so much. That said, there is one proviso.

People who eat a diet high in spicy foods don't always get the pain-blocking benefit because the capsaicin found in chilli peppers prevents it from occurring.

Orgasms Will Help You Have a Healthy Baby

If you're pregnant, the regular release of oxytocin that occurs when you orgasm is highly beneficial. Not only does it help create a healthy pregnancy overall, but regular orgasms have been proven to help women carry their babies to term, especially in cases of women prone to miscarriage.

Orgasms Will Help You Live Longer

A South Whales study conducted over the course of 10 years examined the relationship between the frequency of orgasm and mortality among middle-aged men, who were asked about their physical health in addition to the frequency of orgasms.

At the 10-year follow-up, it was found that those who had two or more orgasms a week had a full 50 percent lower mortality risk than those who had less-frequent orgasms. Follow-up studies have since shown a positive association between sexual intercourse and women's longevity as well, so keep on playing 3DX Chat! ❤️

Want to enjoy all the health benefits of cybersex, but don't have the time to find regular, quality sex partners on 3DX Chat? Visit the amazing virtual escorts at White Breeze and treat yourself! With over fifteen girls to choose from, you're bound to find someone perfect for you! Click below for more.

The logo for White Breeze features the word "WHITE" in a simple, black, sans-serif font above the word "Breeze" in a large, black, cursive script font. The "Breeze" text is stylized with long, flowing lines extending from the end of the word.

Kink Shaming... Yourself

Guilt is about something we did. Shame is about something we are.

By JamieSweet

If you're reading this, you're probably kinky. And not just because of this article's topic, but because virtually everyone is. Most of us have at least one non-vanilla desire. Most of us 3DX Chat players, in fact, have several. And that, as it turns out, is completely normal.

A study in the Journal of Sexual Medicine surveyed over 1,500 people from all adult age groups and walks of life, and found that very few sexual fantasies are actually atypical. For example, 64.6% of women and 53.3% of men admitted to having fantasies regarding sexual submission. Most people of both genders desire to be sexually dominated.

Yet the western world, and especially North America, is steeped in sex-negative culture. Even if you didn't get an abstinence-only sexual education in school, you're likely to have grown up with the impression that sex—especially kinky sex—is “dirty”. Most people will go their entire lives without confessing their innermost kinks to even their closest lovers, and will forever feel shame about even having them. And shame is so much worse than guilt.

When we feel guilty it's about something we did, and because of that we can strive to avoid doing that thing in the future. Perhaps even correct our wrongdoings through confession or restitution. But when we feel shame it's about something we are, and that's much more challenging to deal with.

Why Do We Kink Shame Ourselves?

I come from pretty much pure Irish stock, and if there's one thing we Irish are good at it's harboring shame. Perhaps its because of our long, miserable history of religious persecution, imperialism, effective slavery and extreme poverty. Or perhaps it's simply because, on some level, we feel a twisted kind of pride in our emotional self torment, as exhibited in the novel Last Chance Saloon by Marian Keyes:

“All that praying you made us do,” complained Maggie. “And making us go to Mass. And starving us on Good Friday, and making us feel ashamed of our bodies and guilty about everything. No, Ma, you were the pits.”

Nuala glowed with pride, truly she has been the best of Irish mothers.

And, unfortunately, we're not alone. Many people not just keep, but prize, the poisoned jewel of shame in their lives. It makes us feel morally superior to perpetually acknowledge our own failings, and we deeply resent those who don't seem to wear the same chains.

And, ironically, what could be more perverse than that?

“Our kinks don't exist for no reason. They are part of who we are, what we've experienced and, perhaps, all that we've been deprived of.”

How to Stop

Though we like to pretend otherwise, part of not being a sociopath is defining ourselves by cues we take from the society around us. And, unfortunately, there are those who like to make themselves feel big by trying to make others feel small.

It may take the form of an outright and explicit condemnation, a careless, tittering faux pas, or a cruel backhanded compliment, but it always stings.

That said, no matter whether you like whipping people, having large, uncomfortable items stuck up your rear end, or being dressed as Batgirl during sex, there are other people out there who share your kink (or have complimentary ones).

Connecting with other kinky people on 3DX is thus not only a great way of finding potential playmates, but to join communities that understand and accept you. Naturally not all your friends will share your kinks, nor will you want to be friends with everyone who does, but having people who don't think you have anything to be ashamed about is crucial to letting go of your baggage. Though don't make the mistake that it'll happen in a day.

Our kinks don't exist for no reason. They are part of who we are, what we've experienced and, perhaps, all that we've been deprived of. Humans are complex creatures, and just because you've found your place in the grand pecking order that is society doesn't mean you'll be instantly at peace.

Practice Self Care

Developing a circle of friends who accept and understand you is part of self-care, but to really let go of shame you need to treat yourself with respect and kindness.

Meditation, exercise, sleeping enough and healthy eating are all ways in which you can both increase your sense of self-worth, and increase your patience and ability to manage internal stressors such as sexuality-based shame. It's hard to feel good about anything, let alone your kinks, if the rest of you isn't properly cared for, so take the time to invest in yourself.

Do As I Say, Not As I Do.

As I write this it's 5:40 in the morning, and that's not because I got up early, but because I stayed up that late. Though I run orgies on 3DX and publish a magazine dedicated to virtually every kink there is, I know I have huge sexual and relational hang-ups.

I don't exercise. Half the time I border on anorexia. And though I try so hard to let go of my shame, I lay awake every night (that I even bother to try and sleep) thinking of all the ways I'm an awful person. So I get it. Letting yourself be you can be incredibly hard, so I do not give the advice here flippantly.

If you've never been stuck in the mire of shame, or have managed to get yourself free of it, I salute you. I hope one day to join you. But for those of you who, like me, self-flagellate yourself over your sexual desires and choices, know you're not alone.

I'm doing my best to follow my own advice, and I hope that you find it useful as well. Bit by bit, little by little, we can free ourselves from shame together. ❤️

Miss December: DianaPrincessX

Meet DianaPrincessX, our 3DX player of the month!

By JamieSweet

Winter time in my homeland is a mercurial season. A mix of warmth and cold. Of cuddly bonding and icy distance. Of sweet, gentle nights sipping hot chocolate by the fireside, and thrilling toboggan rides down snowy mountaintops. It's a season that both brings out the best in us with peace, generosity and forgiveness, but also challenges us with slippery roads, burnt turkeys and trying to find the perfect gift for someone we love.

In many ways, Diana personifies this season. Like old St. Nicholas, she is at once supremely giving and not afraid to drop a lump of coal in your stocking if she reckons you've been bad. Like Jack Frost, she has a wicked sense of fun, but can turn icy as the northern wind if you offend her. She is as complex and unique as a snowflake, but as unpredictable as she can be there is one constant—and that is her sincerity.

DianaPrincessX

Message Gallery (8) Gifts (134) Send Gift Unfriend Ignore Report

 Age 39
Interested in Women
Location In April's arms
Married to Aprilx

About me

Looking for women / Futas to have fun with. And no, I don't play with men. Sorry guys.

Not into Dom / Sub, BDSM or toilet stuff. Any other kink is more than fine :-)

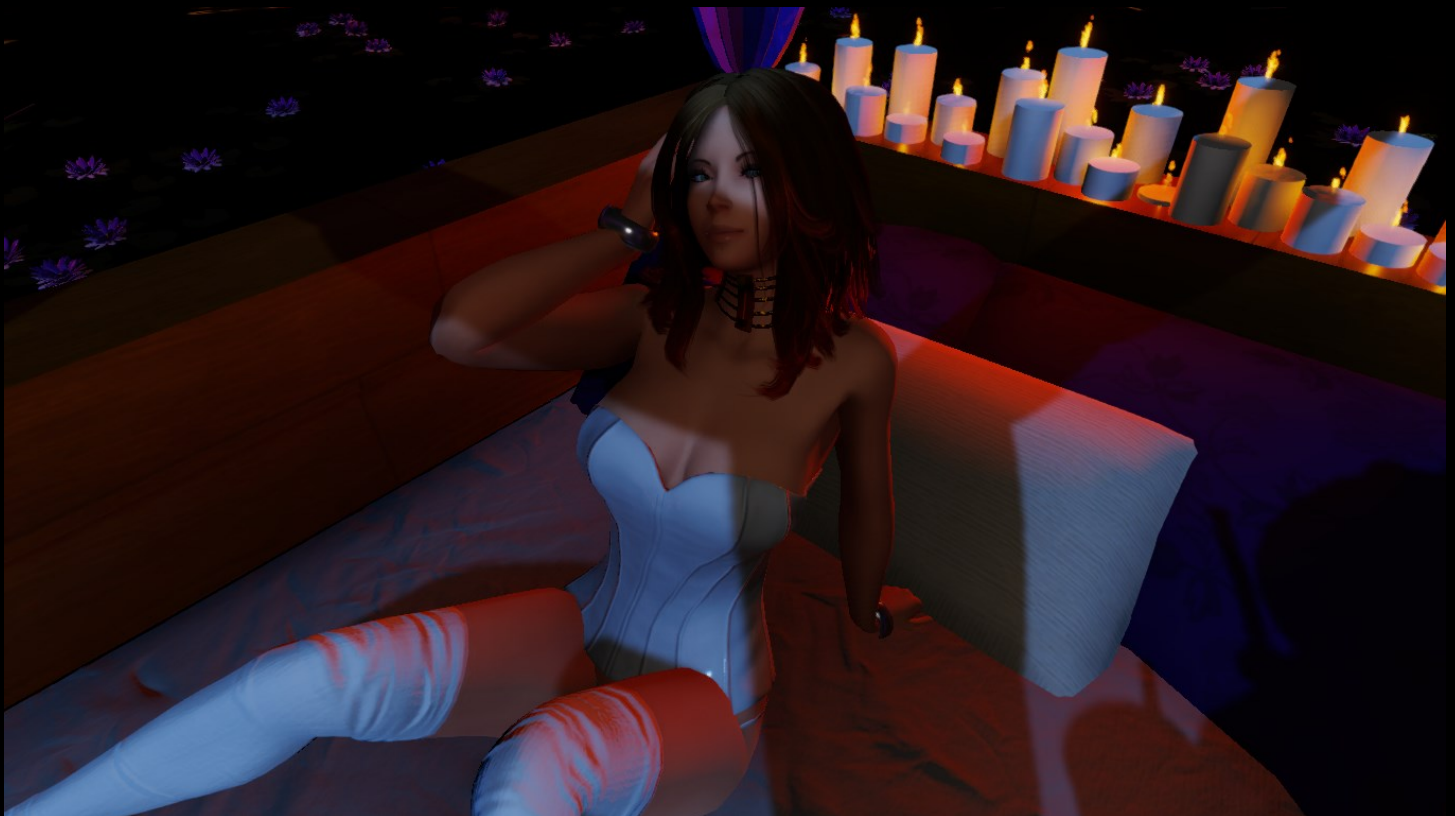

Ger / En / Typonese

Aprilx is my wife, my sister, my love and my best friend. I'll love her till eternity. She is everything I need!
Happily married since April 22nd, 2019

JamieSweet and Malcy are my best friends. I love them more than they will ever know.

Diana is very much a princess in the very best sense of that word. Proud yet noble. Fierce yet honorable. Uncompromising but always willing to listen, and to admit when she is wrong. It is not easy to earn her friendship, but once you have it she will stand with you through anything, and that regal demeanor has its own special, sensual glamour.

Diana is a breathtakingly wonderful lover, able to unlock both tenderness and kink in its most refined forms, and to entwine them into an experience as sweet and exciting as a bright Christmas morning making love with that special someone. She can do this because, at her core, she is vulnerable. Ready to open her heart to those who have earned that special privilege, and to hold absolutely nothing back when she gives her love. Diana is like an Amazon. A Valkyrie. A sapphic enchantress. And few women have her kind of uncompromising courage. ❤️

Click
the difference!

<https://whitebreeze.vip>

The 2019 Cybersex Survey Results

The survey is done. The results are in. Let's see what we learned.

By JamieSweet

One month ago our magazine launched a completely anonymous survey in an attempt to learn more about the habits and experiences of 3DX Chat players, and I'm happy to report that a total of 152 of our readers responded.

Since the survey sample was so large, no participant's identity will ever be known, and it was made clear that this was our attempt at a non-judgemental, purely scientific sociological study, it's my belief that the answers were overwhelmingly truthful, and as such accurately reflect what's going on in 3DX.

So, without further ado, here's the raw data for your consideration...

Question #1: Which adult virtual worlds have you been a member of in the past 12 months?

3DX Chat: 100% (152 of 152)

AChat: 19.74% (30 of 152)

ChatHouse3D: 19.74% (30 of 152)

IMVU: 5.26% (8 of 152)

MNF Club: 21.05% (32 of 152)

Red Light Center: 10.53% (16 of 152)

Second Life: 7.89% (12 of 152)

Yareel: 3.95% (6 of 152)

Other: 0.00% (0 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.00% (0 of 152)

Notes: The fact that 100% of respondents play 3DX Chat was pretty much a given seeing as the survey was exclusively aimed at them. That said, it's interesting that the next three most popular games were the relatively small virtual worlds of AChat, ChatHouse3D and MNF Club, with a minimum of one in five 3DX players also having visited at least one of them in the past year. Meanwhile, huge worlds like IMVU and Second Life are far less popular, with Second Life capturing less than 10% of 3DX players and IMVU just over 5%.

Question #2: How many close, personal friendships have you established, and consistently maintained, in adult virtual worlds over the past 12 months?

None: 6.58% (10 of 152)

1 or 2: 25.66% (39 of 152)

3 to 5: 34.87% (53 of 152)

6 or More: 32.23% (49 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.66% (1 of 152)

Notes: Over 90% of 3DX plays maintain at least one meaningful friendship online, with more than half enjoying three or more such friendships.

This can be compared to a 2004 Gallup pole which revealed that over 50% of Americans have five or less close friends in their lives, and a 2016 Facebook study which revealed that, though the average Facebook user has 155 "friends", they would only classify four of those as being close.

If the ordinary person only has four or five close friends in total, this may suggest that 3DX players tend to do a very large proportion of their socializing in virtual environments.

Question #3: Have you been part of a romantic relationship, such as a prolonged dating or marriage, within an adult world, over the past 12 months?

Yes: 67.76% (103 of 152)

No: 31.58% (48 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.66% (1 of 152)

Notes: The fact that over two thirds of 3DX players have had virtual relationships in the past year speaks to just how deep and meaningful online relationships can really be, and to how many people are seeking them in virtual environments.

Question #4: Is your real world biological gender male or female?

Male: 60.53% (92 of 152)

Female: 36.18% (55 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 3.29% (5 of 152)

Notes: The fact that five people opted not to answer this question may indicate that those who were at all hesitant about sharing this information simply opted out, this making it more likely that the data we did collect is accurate.

According to a 2014 Entertainment Software Association survey, 48% of MMO players are female, while several studies on female viewership of pornography indicate that roughly 27% of women watch porn videos on a regular basis. If we round these numbers to 50% and 30% respectively, the idea that adult virtual world populations are about one third female seems quite believable, and that's exactly what our survey says.

Question #5: In regards to 3DX Chat, how many alts do you normally maintain and utilize in the game?

None: 49.34% (75 of 152)

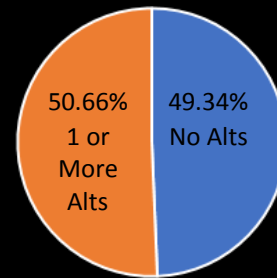

One: 26.97% (41 of 152)

Two: 17.11% (26 of 152)

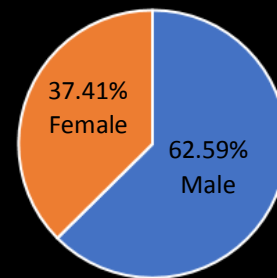

Three or More: 6.58% (10 of 152)

Notes: This data reveals that not only do a slight majority of 3DX players use alts, but about 7% of them have multiple accounts (as it's impossible to have more than two alts otherwise).

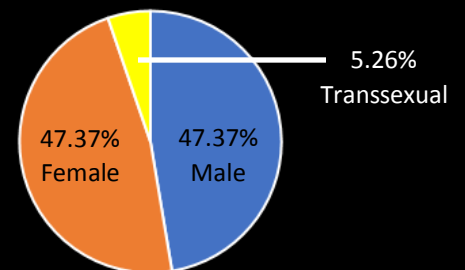

Percentage of Players Who Use Alts

Biological Genders of 3DX Players

Genders of 3DX Avatars

Question #6: Is your primary 3DX Chat avatar male, female or transgendered (transsexual or futanari)?

Male: 47.37% (72 of 152)

Female: 47.37% (72 of 152)

Transgendered 5.26% (8 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.00% (0 of 152)

Notes: This data, in addition to that provided from question four, gives us some idea of how many female avatars in game are played by biological males—a common topic of debate.

If we remove those who did not wish to reveal their biological gender, we are left with 147 respondents, of which 92 (62.59%) are biological males and 55 (37.41%) are biological females.

Meanwhile, removing transgendered avatars from the equation, we are left with an exact 50/50 split between male and female ones.

Assuming no biological female players use male avatars, that must mean that, at most, 18 of the 92 biological males who responded to our survey use female avatars. In other words, about one in five female avatars you see in game are actually being controlled by a biological male in real life—a high percentage, but far from a majority.

Question #7: Generally speaking, how many days per week do you log on to 3DX Chat for 30 minutes or more?

1 or Less Days: 1.32% (2 of 152)

2 to 3 Days: 19.74% (30 of 152)

4 to 5 Days: 23.68% (36 of 152)

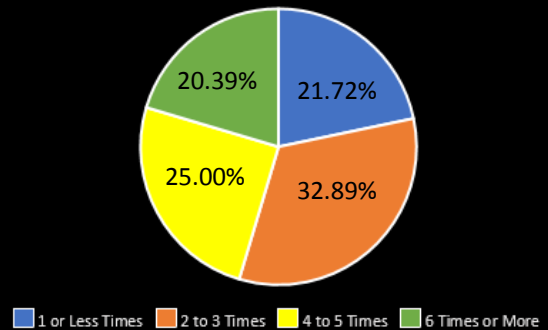

6 to 7 Days: 55.26% (84 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.00% (0 of 152)

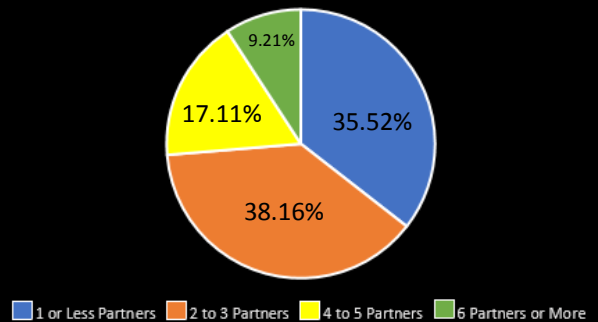

Notes: Almost 80% of 3DX players log on for at least 30 minutes, four days a week or more, meaning there

“...about one in five female avatars you see in game is actually being controlled by a biological male in real life—a high percentage, but far from a majority.”

Times Per Week 3DX Players Have Cybersex

Number of Sexual Partners 3DX Players Have Per Week

is an extremely high level of engagement with the game. This jives well with the information collected from questions #2 and #3 in this survey.

Question #8: Generally speaking, how many times per week do you engage in cybersex with other players in 3DX Chat?

1 or Less Times: 21.72% (33 of 152)

2 to 3 Times: 32.89% (50 of 152)

4 to 5 Times: 25.00% (38 of 152)

6 or More Times: 20.39% (31 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.00% (0 of 152)

Notes: This information was somewhat surprising. Though 3DX is a “sax game”, one in five players only has sex once per week or less—almost exactly as many who get busy six times or more. This would indicate that a very significant minority of the player base frequent 3DX for non-sexual reasons such as building, entertaining and socializing.

Question #9: Generally speaking, how many partners do you engage in cybersex with per week on 3DX Chat? Example: If you regularly have cybersex four times per week, but each time it’s with the same person, your correct answer to this question would be “one”.

1 or Less Partners: 35.52% (54 of 152)

2 or 3 Partners: 38.16% (58 of 152)

4 or 5 Partners: 17.11% (26 of 152)

6 or More Partners: 9.21% (14 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 0.00% (0 of 152)

Notes: Again, surprising results. Despite all the sex rooms, orgies and swinging in 3DX, about one in three players have sex with one or less partners per week. Then again, with about two thirds of respondents having reported being involved in a romantic relationship over the past year, perhaps semi-monogamy is far more prevalent than some suspected.

Question #10: Which of the following sexual practices / kinks do you regularly engage in during cybersex on 3DX Chat?

Heterosexual Sex: 85.53% (130 of 152)

Homosexual Sex: 35.53% (54 of 152)

Oral Sex: 95.39% (145 of 152)

Vaginal Sex: 93.42% (142 of 152)

Anal Sex: 71.05% (108 of 152)

BDSM: 29.61% (45 of 152)

Erotic Roleplay: 69.08% (105 of 152)

Gangbangs: 14.47% (22 of 152)

Threesomes: 54.61% (83 of 152)

Orgies: 39.47% (60 of 152)

Virtual Escort Services: 17.11% (26 of 152)

Prefer Not to Answer: 1.32% (2 of 152)

Notes: It will be interesting to see if and how things change by our 2020 survey. Of particular interest will be whether virtual escort service usage increases what with the dynamic growth of White Breeze.

Conclusions

3DX Chat is not just a game, but a virtual society with it’s own dynamic, multicultural culture. Adults of all ages and walks of life, and from every corner of the world, choose to make 3DX a big part of their lives, investing their time, creativity and emotions into it.

I, for one, find it all fascinating, and am very thankful to all the respondents for the information they’ve provided. You’ve helped us better understand this virtual reality we share, and our place in it as individuals. ❤️

Opal Star

Tired of a humdrum existence on Earth? Come sail the friendly stars!

By JamieSweet

Opal Star represents both the first and last word in interstellar luxury travel, offering exclusive cruises throughout charted space onboard 1,000 meters of pure opulence.

With 0.9 Earth gravity maintained throughout your voyage, you'll be traveling with a spring in your step, enjoying free-flowing premium wines and spirits, delicious gourmet cuisine, in-suite dining, full robotic butler service for every suite, fabulous galaxy-class entertainment and of course a highly permissive, clothing optional, sex-positive atmosphere.

Whether you long to mingle in the nudist cloud cities of Venus, luxuriate in the volcanic sex spas of Europa or explore the dark delights of Pluto's Cthulhu Macula, the Opal Star can take you there—and beyond—in style.

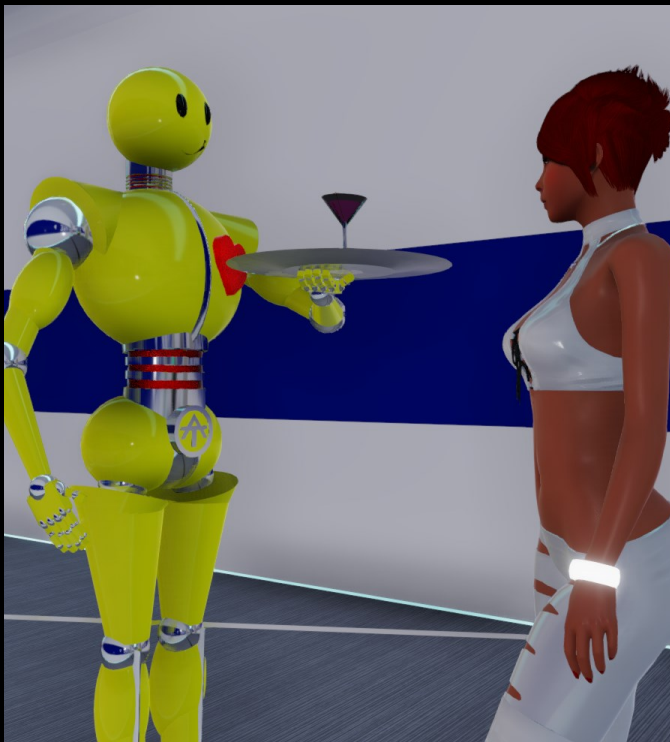

Optimal Accommodations

Opal Star has been voted best luxury star cruiser, so it is no surprise that our suites offer one of the highest space-per-guest ratios of any luxury cruise accommodations. All of our suites feature panoramic views, and come equipped with a plethora of adult amenities, with every guest pampered by the personalised services of an attentive robotic butler.

Unparalleled Service

As you step back on board after every excursion, your butler will be waiting to greet you with a smile and a fresh martini. As you slide out of our warm pool of Tethysian mineral water, a deck hand has already prepared your towel. As you sit down to dinner, your favourite drink appears as if by magic. With a staff to guest ration of almost 1:1, our service remains the jewel in Opal Star's crown. Devoted, discreet and experienced, these dedicated men, women and robots are the key to turning your trip into a long-lasting memory.

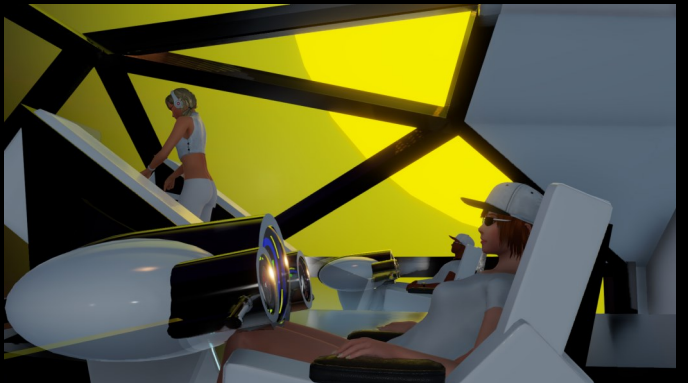

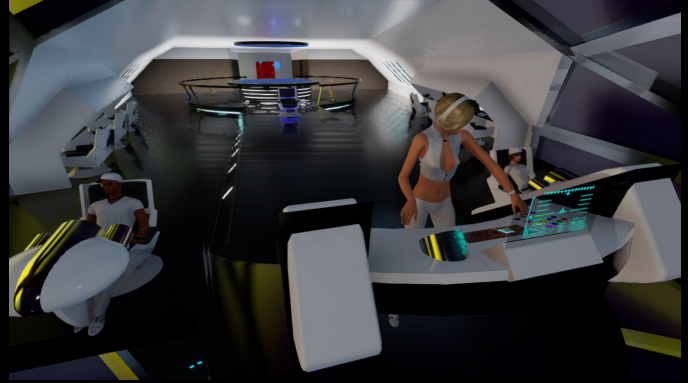

Guaranteed Safety

Space doesn't have to be a dangerous place, especially with the Opal Star's elite crew, AAA+ class artificial intelligence and bleeding edge design. Powered by the euphoric psychic radiation of a macroscopic organic cell, the Opal Star's propulsion and energy systems are legendarily smooth and reliable.

Come Aboard

The Opal Star regularly departs 3DX Chat under the command of Captain Amy Trubblemaker. So escape the cold (or heat, depending on your hemisphere) of Earth and indulge in the wonders of this peerless star-ship. You deserve the very best. ❤️

Masters of Dance

From sisterhood to dance troupe, the story of the Bare Bunnies is unique.

By JamieSweet

If you've spent any time at all on 3DX, then you've seen the Bare Bunnies: the most well-known dance troupe in the game. But, while you're probably familiar with their wonderfully positive personalities and the mesmerizing synchronicity of their sexy routines, you may not know the story of how they came to be.

I was lucky enough to get an interview with the trio that leads the bunnies, Flora, Scarlett and Stella, and here's what they had to say...

Cybersex: The Bare Bunnies have become very well known in 3DX. How long have you been around?

Flora: We've been around for about eighteen months now, though it took some time to build our identity as a dance troupe. At the beginning, the Bare Bunnies were part of a social club called the White Rabbit Society.

Cybersex: And what is the White Rabbit Society about?

Scarlett: The WRS was a sisterhood; a group of girls that got together to chat and be friends and provide mutual support. At first, we just used to congregate when there was enough of us around. Then, slowly, there were more and more pre-planned parties and meetups.

The founder was a larger than life character called JaimeUK, and she had the fastest typing speed - and wit - of nearly everyone I know. Jaime always wore a bunny girl costume—the traditional black one. And, that sort of became our trademark. Jaime suggested we always wear at least the ears to our meetups.

One day, a friend from outside the group asked if the WRS could organize a group of girls to pole dance as part of a big event she was having. We got into matching costumes and performed our routine, and it was enormous fun.

We started to get more and more requests, so we decided to give our dance team a name, and the Bare Bunnies was what we agreed upon.

Cybersex: So how did you come to develop your trademark synchronized dance routines?

Scarlett: At first, we did mainly pole dancing, then, one day, another group turned up to an event (we call them “gigs”), and had a group of four girls in sync. It was impressive, so we started to explore sync techniques ourselves.

We developed ways of using pairing and coordination in group chat to sync any number of girls. I think our record right now is thirteen at one time, but, in theory, it’s unlimited.

We’ve also experimented with formations and how to orient ourselves for certain dances—like when we do dance 8 and flash the audience.

Another thing we developed was techniques for “syncing by eye”, which is sometimes possible. We use that to fix syncs that have gone a little wrong, though, of course, we’re aware of the technical limitations of the game, such as server lag.

Cybersex: So are you the original dance troupe on 3DX?

Stella: We can’t be 100% sure we were the first. 3DX is about to celebrate it’s 7th birthday, while we started our adventure in 2018. But, as far as I remember at that time, there was no other dance team with more than a handful of members.

Cybersex: So, how long does it take to train a new member? Sounds like the techniques you’re using take a lot of practice.

Flora: Yes, they do, but it all depends on the person. Some are just more naturally skilled than others.

Scarlett: We run practice sessions about once a week, where trainees can develop their skills without worrying about an audience.

Flora: We have our own training center, and Stella is building the Bare Bunnies Academy as we speak!

Cybersex: How many Bare Bunnies are there at the point?

Flora: Yes, they do, but it all depends on the person. Some are just more naturally skilled than others.

Scarlett: We run practice sessions about once a week, where trainees can develop their skills without worrying about an audience.

Flora: We have our own training center, and Stella is building the Bare Bunnies Academy as we speak!

Cybersex: How many Bare Bunnies are there at this point?

Flora: Around twenty at the moment. Fifteen full members, and seven or eight trainees.

Cybersex: Would it be fair to say that the White Rabbit Society evolved into the Bare Bunnies?

Scarlett: I'd say "sort of". The Bare Bunnies have taken a lot of our principles from the old WRS. We don't just see ourselves as a dance team. We're closer than that.

We like to think that we give our girls more than just fun; that we help boost their self-confidence. Some of our girls used to be shy, but now they're confident leading a team in a room with a hundred people in it.

Flora: The Bare Bunnies is a sisterhood, and we spend a lot of time together. Four to six hours per gig, and, for a year, we've had an average of five gigs per week.

Scarlett: As for the WRS, that still exists separately. Now it's a brand for our more "offbeat" events, like our fashion show.

Cybersex: So, are there regular venues where you perform? Are there any places you avoid?

Flora: We don't do recurring gigs at the same place, and we don't dance in sex rooms. Those are a couple of our rules. We have a few partners—big groups like Synthesis of Sound and Heavens Chat—and we also dance for individuals, for our friends, etc.

Cybersex: Do you have fans who follow you around? Who make a point of attending your events?

Flora: We do, actually. Our dancers' partners are usually there to support us, and we have a few guys that are regulars at our performances.

Cybersex: A few other dance troupes have popped up in recent months, like the Pole Cats, for example. Do your two groups know each other, or ever perform together?

Scarlett: We actually do some joint gigs with the Pole Cats, and there are other dance teams which have been formed by former members of the Bare Bunnies. We aren't deeply involved with any other team, but I think I can safely say that their structures are very similar to ours—or are at least trying to be.

Cybersex: You've danced at so many events. Are there any special experiences you've had which you'd like to share?

Scarlett: We have special, deeply satisfying moments all the time. Like when we have a big dance team out there, and we all get into perfect sync and it looks great.

Also, we have a little ritual that we do at the end of every gig. We coordinate to applaud the audience in sync, then we break formation and hug each other, and then we do the bunny run!

Cybersex: The bunny run?

Flora: After hugging each other, we run all over the room in every direction. It's a lot of fun, and looks great when there's enough Bunnies around.

Those are the special moments we get to share over and over again.

Cybersex: Any last message you'd like to send out to our readers?

Scarlett: We just hope everyone enjoys our shows.

Flora: And, we'd like to take this opportunity to thank all of our girls. Daysie, Jen, Jasmine, Dove, Junbug, Stacey, Kim, Bunny, Snow, Loli, and all the others for their dedication and faith. For sticking with us through thick and thin. They make us proud to be Bunnies. ❤️

Casting call

White Rabbit Society

3DXChat

CATWALK FASHION SHOW

14 December 9PM CET

DJs : Vix Juxxx OOlisa AllieHotAss Richo

Bare Bunnies

Player1's Guide to Women

The no BS approach to getting what you want from women on 3DX Chat.

By Player1

Editor's Note

This article may be offensive to some of our readers. The views in this article do not reflect the views of us here at Cybersex magazine, but we have chosen to include this article in the interest of free speech, and to provide a differing opinion from a fellow 3DX player.

People tend to get their backs up anytime they're excluded from anything, but this article is written for men. Sorry ladies, you're just not the target audience for this one, so if you don't have a Y chromosome, stop reading now. Consider that your trigger warning.

So, now that all the ladies are out of the proverbial room, we guys can have a serious talk about how to get what we want from women. The kind of nonsense, completely politically incorrect talk that will help you have a happier life here on 3dx.

Equality Doesn't Exist

To begin with, forget about equality and fairness. Men and women are not equal, and they never have been.

We men die younger, make up the vast majority of the prison and homeless population, are the minority of those with college and university educations, commit suicide far more often than women and routinely have our lives destroyed and children taken from us in divorces which are, most of the time, asked for by women. Everything above is simply a fact.

The truth is that nobody ever asks us what we plan to do after a baby is born, because the answer is always

"to continue working." On a sinking ship, we're the last ones off. And, in modern warfare, we make up at least 98% of the combat deaths.

Yet, where are all the girls to protest and address those inequalities? Nowhere. And, that alone should tell you that many women simply see us as disposable. So much so, in fact, that it doesn't even occur to them to care about what happens to us.

Does that mean women owe us anything? No, it doesn't. All I'm saying is that we certainly don't owe them. As a gender, they're doing us men zero favors.

So, if you're feeling guilty about the idea of getting what you want out of women then, in my opinion, you're kind of a chump, because few are the females who will ever think twice about getting everything they can out of you. To most women, a man is just a tool to use till it wears out or gets broken, and that's just the way it is.

The bottom line is that, just by being born a man, you've already been dealt some lousy cards, and that goes double in a virtual environment where your good cards like physical strength and durability mean nothing. But, not to worry, because, by playing them correctly, you can still win this game, and win it often.

The Weakness of Women

We hear so much about "strong empowered women", and, yes, a few of those actually exist. But, understand that most girls simply aren't, just as most men aren't strong and empowered either. Most human beings are riddled with insecurities, though how men and women deal with those feelings differ tremendously.

Men deal with their weaknesses by trying to be useful. We develop skills, make connections, take our beatings and claw our way forward, because we achieve our self-value through stoic self-sacrifice. That's been our way since the dawn of time.

Women... not so much. The biggest weakness women have is that they are so used to the multitude of privileges and protections they were born into that a low level kind of narcissism has set in with many, and all a narcissist cares about is being considered special.

See, women enjoy sex every bit as much as men do, but the reason most don't just get down to business like us is that they like having their egos stroked even more than their clits. It's not enough for a woman to share pleasure on an equal basis. They need to be told how beautiful they are, how sexy they are, and how amazing they are (especially when they're obviously not).

So, understand right out of the gate that the way to most women's hearts (and pussies) is through their ego, and to get there you'll need the right attitude, the right compliments, and two magic words...

The Right Attitude

You want to be friendly, you want to be casual, and you want to be fun. Any sign of desperation will be seen as weakness, so never give her any indication that you need her to have a good time. And, the best way to do this? Simple. Never hit on just one woman at a time.

When I enter a room on 3DX, I work the whole place, hitting on as many girls as I reasonably can. I treat it like a game, so I'm never really worried if I score with any particular girl. More often than not I bed at least one, and plenty of times I wind up with a selection of willing girls to take back to my place.

The Right Compliments

Women generally don't care what praise they receive, so long as it sounds remotely believable. You can compliment their profiles. The pictures in their galleries. The look of their avatar, or their accomplishments in-game. But, what you want to make sure of is that every compliment alludes to pleasing you. Here's some examples so you can see what I mean:

The wrong way to compliment:

I love your avatar. You're so creative.

The right way to compliment:

I don't know how you do it, but your avatar is literally my dream girl. I swear, you've made my perfect fantasy.

The wrong way to compliment:

You're such a good DJ. I loved your set. You have great taste in music.

The right way to compliment:

You know, it felt like you selected every one of those songs just for me. Each one just made me want you more.

The wrong way to compliment:

This room you made is so awesome. You're really a great builder.

The right way to compliment:

You know, it's like you custom made this room for me. Everything I want is here. I just love the way your mind works.

By giving these kind of compliments, you're accomplishing two things. Firstly, you're being different. Most people give generalized compliments that she's likely heard a thousand times before. You want yours to stand out.

Secondly, you're building up sexual tension without being overt about it. You're not just letting her know that you'd like to fuck her brains out; you're telling her why you would.

The Magic Words

Once you've plied a girl with enough compliments that she's become receptive to you, the final step is to utter those two magic words that all women secretly love: "I want..."

Once you've sufficiently stroked a girl's ego and she's ready to give it up, what she'll want more than anything is to be told what to do.

That's not because women are submissive, because typically they're not. It's because women have been taught to let the man take the lead, and, if you don't, there's a major danger of things stalling.

But, that's fine, because now you can ask for just about anything you desire, and, more often than not, a girl will perform.

Building the Addiction

If you follow these three steps correctly, both you and your partner are going to have a good time. She's going to feel special, and you're both going to have some great sex. But how do you keep her coming back for more?

Simple. Just repeat what you did last time.

The more a girl associates you with pleasure, the more receptive she'll be to you the next time around, and the more she'll want to claim you as her own. In fairness, that's true of men, too. It's pure Pavlovian conditioning. The further you take this, the harder she'll chase you, and the more and more she'll be willing to do to please you.

Is that because girls are dumb? No, not at all. But, girls are human, and all humans suffer from something called confirmation bias.

Let's say you make a girl feel special. Odds are, she'd much rather believe that she's really special than that you're just telling her what she wants to hear to get in her panties.

Let's say she has sex with you. She'd probably much rather believe that it's because there was some wonderful chemistry between you two, rather than that you tricked her into it.

Let's say you got her to lose her inhibitions and do all kinds of exciting, kinky things with you. She's going to want to believe that it happened because she really likes and trusts you, and not that she was just really horny and you told her what to do.

Given a bit of time, she's going to build a million reasons in her head about why you're the one she wants. Which is why, when she catches you banging her best friend behind her back, she'll actually believe you when you say "I made a mistake. She means nothing to me. All I really want is you."

Get a girl addicted to you and it won't be you chasing her, but her chasing you. And, if you repeat this process with multiple girls, you'll eventually wind up with them fighting over you—even though they should all really know better.

Don't Believe Your Own Lies

A lie told often enough will be believed. The danger is that, over time, even the liar will come to believe his own falsehoods.

The irony is that many a man has started out playing a girl, then wound up falling for her—believing his own BS that she's somehow amazing or special or "the one".

Don't be that idiot, because it's not going to end well. The second you start getting emotionally invested in a girl will be the second you stop manipulating her. And, that's when the illusion you've created will start to melt.

She'll start to see you for who you really are, and, most of the time, we know how that's going to end—with her going off to find another man who makes her feel "special".

If you really care about her, and you really want to keep her, then the sad truth is you can never stop with the mind games. Sure, you can quit sleeping around. Quit hitting on her friends when her back is turned. But, you can never end the illusion. If you really love her, then understand that you'll never have the luxury of sharing who you really are.

Why? Because, odds are good that you're a nice guy. And, when it comes to most women, nice guys finish last.

A Word to the Women

Yeah, I knew you wouldn't listen to me when I said not to read this article. And, by now you're likely thinking I'm some kind of misogynistic sociopath. But, take a moment and look at things from a man's point of view for a moment.

Every day, I see nice guys getting shot down by most of you girls. Kind, decent men not just ignored, but brushed off like they're nothing. I see how you treat men, and I see how you abuse those of us who open our hearts to you.

Meanwhile, I'm banging two or three of you a night while dating six or seven of you at any one time. And, I've been doing that for ages, because what I do works. If you were me, can you honestly say you'd be doing anything different?

Would I like to be with someone who loved me for me? Someone I could be honest with and not have to play this game with? Of course I would. But that's just not the reality.

The reality is that, with most people in this day and age, relationships are nothing but a game, and like it or not you're playing.

We all are. ❤️

PansexualPixie

Escort of the month.

By JamieSweet

A Pixie is a magical being of Celtic legend—a sweet, pretty (and naughty) fey, always ready to use her magic to spice up the lives of mortals. And, not only does White Breeze have their very own resident Pixie, but she's pansexual! Let's learn more about one of the most enchanting escorts on 3DX...

Cybersex: Tell us, how did you come to be an escort?

Pansexual Pixie: When I first arrived in Scarlet City (my pet name for 3dx), I was not the Pixie that most people now know and love.

I was extremely shy and unsure of a lot of things, and, for months, sex was just... not exciting for me, as it was all the same.

That is until I met the first person to pop my pixelated cherry. His name was DariusDeLarge, and, oh my GOD! Sex with him was amazing! He was a roleplayer by nature so, when he fucked, dear god, did we fuck. He drove me insane with lust that first night, and as fate would have it, our first roleplay was with me being bought by him.

The amount of sensuality, the thought we'd put into the fantasy, and the sex; oh god, the sex. It was just mind-blowing to me. After that night, I fell in love with my two favorite things to do: roleplaying and escorting.

Getting into being an escort wasn't nearly as tough as you might expect it would be. After we had our fun, he sent me my payment, and I told my sisters about the experience. They were intrigued by the idea, and were curious to see where we could take it.

So, about a month later, we had a room set up, a group of escorts of our own, and a long, long list of clients. Unfortunately, it didn't last and we wound up shutting our doors for good, but I always had that spark for escort work, so I just kept at it until eventually finding a home.

Cybersex: Why did you choose to escort at White Breeze?

Pansexual Pixie: Truthfully, it wasn't a choice. I honestly feel like it was something I needed to do.

I've been around and seen my fair share of escort services and brothels, and White Breeze is, quite possibly, the best I've ever had the pleasure of working in.

The girls are stunningly gorgeous, each with their own little quirks and specialties. We're all so diverse that we never end up stepping on each other's toes on those occasions that we do end up working together.

The upper staff is so nice, and they treat all of us as equals—we're a sweet little family of deviants, and they make sure we remember to care for one another. The room is amazing, small and intimate, and yet spacious enough for privacy, and I love that.

Cybersex: How long have you been working as an escort?

PansexualPixie: On and off for about two years now. Now and then, I take a break from work so that I can binge out a little and just go on a random sex spree. Though it doesn't happen as often as it used to, I still take those breaks.

Cybersex: Sounds like you really love your work! What's your favorite thing to do with a client?

PansexualPixie: I adore roleplaying, so if I can figure out a fetish that someone has, I'll happily do all I can to make their fantasies come to life. I love using my words, and adding every detail I can—it just makes it so much more real for the both of us.

Cybersex: Do you have regulars?

PansexualPixie: A few, but I get more female regulars than guys.

Cybersex: You cater to both genders. Which is your favorite to be with?

PansexualPixie: Females, but don't get me wrong, I love a good dick as much as the next woman. But, women just tend to be more open and creative in bed, and I love the intimacy that comes with them.

Cybersex: What's your favorite way to get someone off?

PansexualPixie: With my mouth. It's such a cliché, but there's just something about oral sex that gets me off. The tongue is such a naughty little thing! And, if you have some skill with it, then it becomes so much more than just a muscle.

I love the soft feeling of skin against my tongue. The taste of peoples juices. The small jolts that you feel right before someone's about to cum. It's just such a turn on for me.

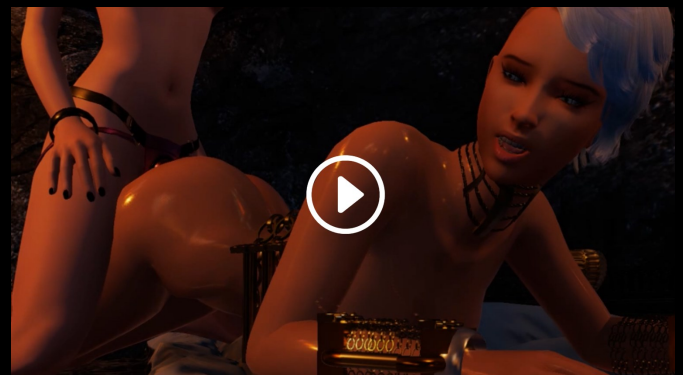

Cybersex: What advice would you have for people wanting to give escorting a try?

PansexualPixie: Just do it! It can be daunting at first, but you've got to remember that this is all for fun. If you don't enjoy it, then what's the point? It's easy enough to find a place to work out of, and if you can't, then even freelance work isn't all that bad.

Just always take a few minutes to get to know your client a little. It's worth it in the long run. Trust me, it makes the sex so much more rewarding, and it's an easy way to get return customers.

If you can legitimately learn what your partner likes, and do it well, then they'll be back so you can bring their next naughty fantasy to life. Get it wrong, through, and they might never come back.

Cybersex: Do you have a favorite roleplay?

PansexualPixie: I'm submissive by nature so anything that puts me in that role is more than enough to turn me on. A bit of incest here, some blackmail there, being someone's maid, just to name a few, though I am a switch and also enjoy being the kind mistress or babysitter every once in a while.

Cybersex: What would you say is the hardest thing about escorting for you?

PansexualPixie: Picking my rates. I'm not an expensive girl, though others think I should be. In the end, I'm just a people pleaser. I simply adore the feeling I get when I make other people's fantasies a reality. I get such a rush from it, and I promise you I'm worth the gifts.

I wouldn't be escorting if I wasn't. ❤️

WHITE Breeze

ESCORT FILE

PansexualPixie is an expert at knowing where to place her hand, her lips, her tongue, and even her thoughts. She knows just how much pressure to use, for how long, and when to stop. She can play any role – your first kiss, your secretary, your daughter? Book time with her now to begin living out your wildest fantasies!

Age: 19

Skin Color: Sun-Kissed

Hair Color: White

Hair Length: Short

Eye Color: Blue

Height: 1.65 m (5'4")

Weight: 54 kg (118 lbs.)

Build: Athletic

Bust Size: Large (D)

Measurements: 34-25-38

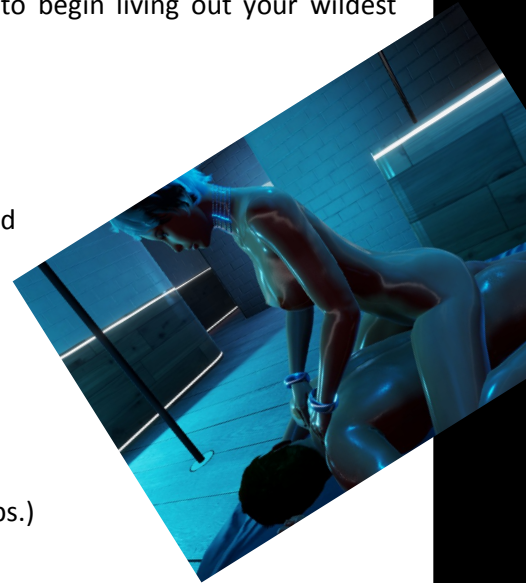

Availability: Incall and Outcall

Interested In: Men and Women, TG/Futa

Home: USA

Languages: English

Favorite Gift: ???

LadyAlexa

Meet LadyAlexa, one of 3DX Chat's most avant-garde world builders.

By JamieSweet

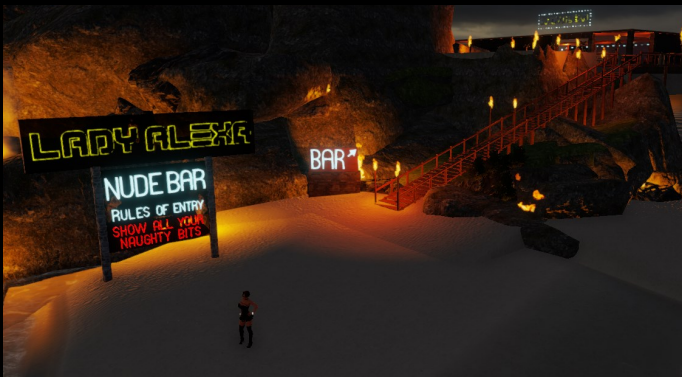

As I mentioned in last month's builder profile, I'm the organizer of SwingSet, and in that role I'm privileged to be offered the creations of some of 3DX's very best builders. And, as you'll see, LadyAlexa certainly counts as one of them.

Most builders tend to copy from others, and never really build up their own style, but walk into one of LadyAlexa's creations and you'll instantly know it's hers. Like a pyromaniac in a fireworks factory, she loves to blow things up with spectacular colors, textures and lighting, her work is a hardcore mix of cyberpunk noir, nudist fantasy, and Hollywood-grade special effects.

Everything she builds feels like her imagination has run riot, and even her most disciplined builds having a seductive and surreal edge to them that grins maniacally in your face—yet somehow it all just... works. LadyAlexa isn't just a builder; she's a force of nature on 3dx. And below are just a few of her amazing builds.

The Naked Isles

"It all began with my Nude Club. When I started, there was just a bar on an island. Then I expanded inside the mountain. Started playing with liquid beds and jelly sofas. I wanted to offer my regulars variety, so I started creating more islands, each with it's own theme and feel. In the end I made one for every day of the week."

"Though I opened a different isle each day, some of my regulars would just swim out to their favorite spots."

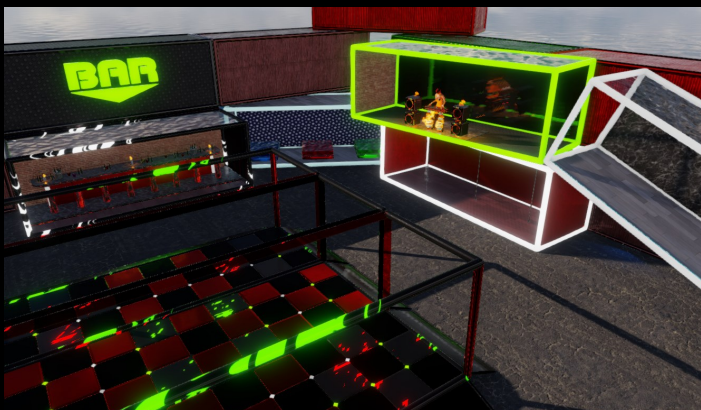

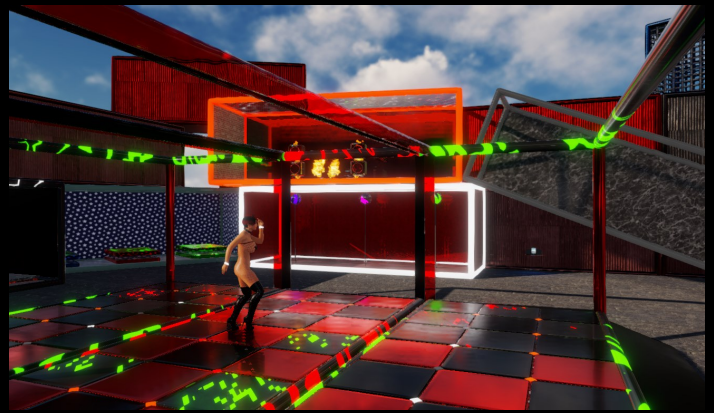

Naked Church

"This is where I really started to improve my designs. I wanted to encourage people to not just take off their clothes, but really get naked. To feel that thrill of shedding their inhibitions. To make it a kind of spiritual experience."

Nude Club

"Everything here is a cargo container. The walls. The dance floor. Even the DJ station. I wanted to see if I could make a whole environment using just one structure. The same thing expressed in different ways."

Nude Club Reloaded

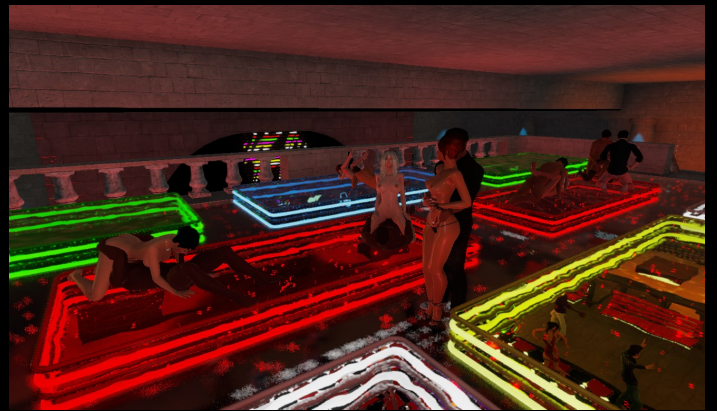

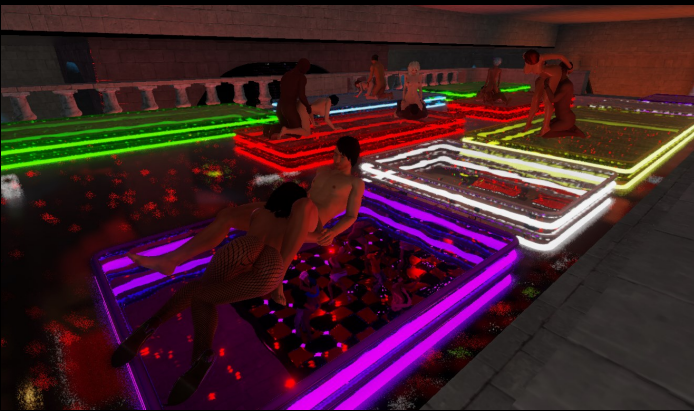

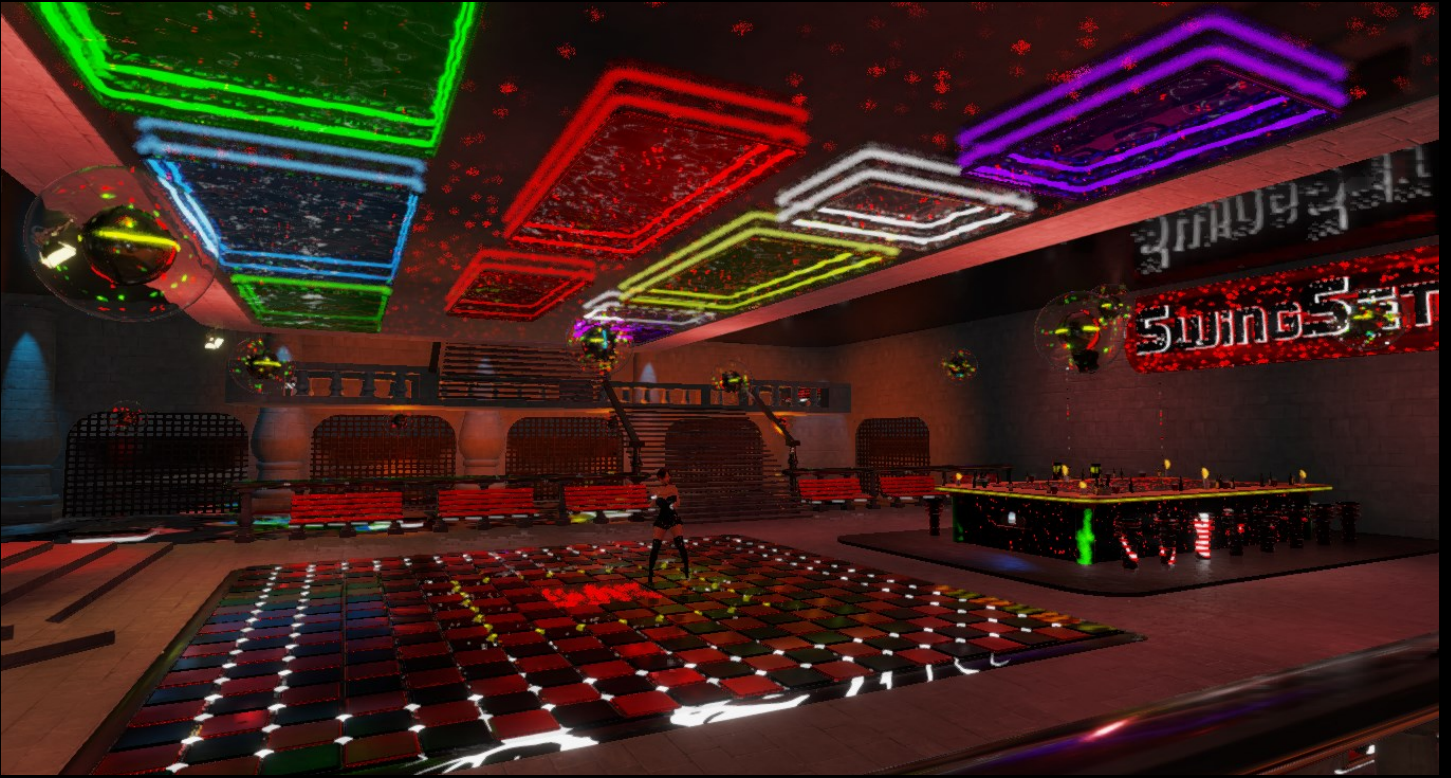

"This is one of my favorites; where all the names of all my closest friends are displayed. There are better designs now for the devil and angel, but not when I designed this venue, and, to be honest, I love that 8-bit look to them."

Several of LadyAlexa's incredible creations are now available for free download at 3DXModz.com.

SwingSet Original

"This was the first orgy room I did for SwingSet; a place for people to really get wild. The first orgy we had here, every bed was filled, and those on the dance floor could look up through the transparent ceiling to see everything."

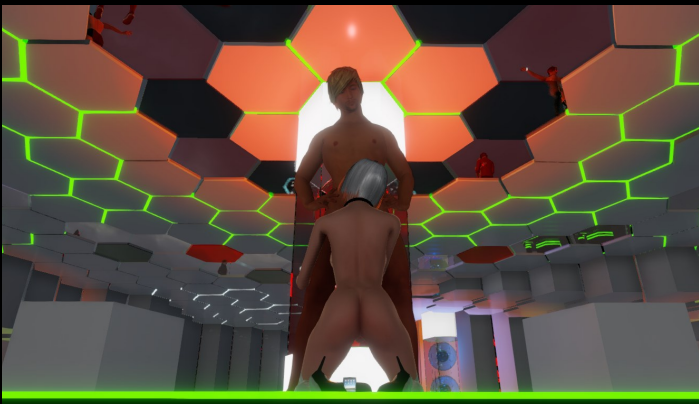

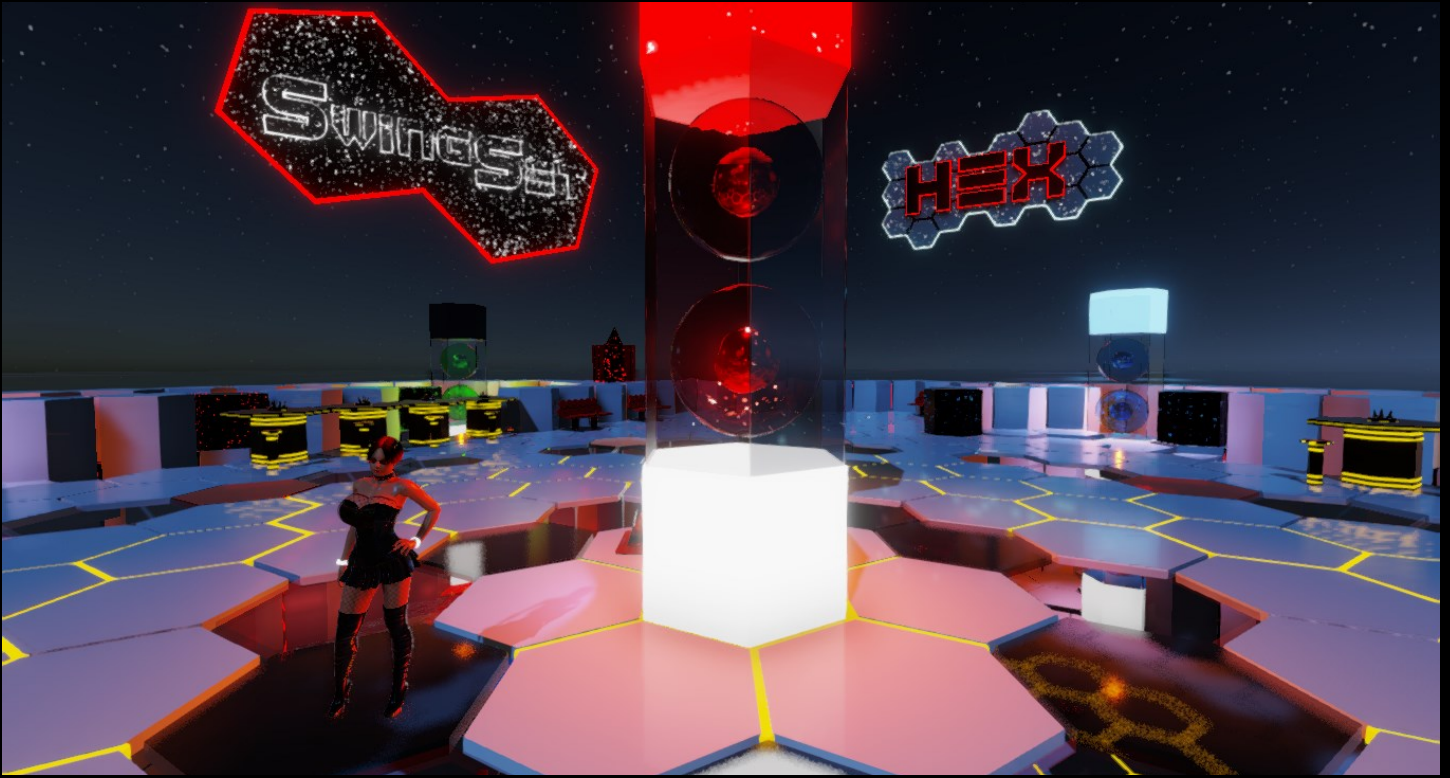

Hell

"This was the first orgy room I did for SwingSet's Halloween orgy. A lot of people at that event commented that if this was hell, then they didn't want to bother with heaven."

Hex

“This is my latest work, again for SwingSet. This was the most structured and mathematical room I’ve ever created, but I still wanted to give it an erotic, surreal vibe. My rooms are made for pleasure in all its forms.” ❤️

The Pseudoscience of Sex Addiction

Despite all the media hysteria, sex addiction simply doesn't exist.

By Jamie Sweet

Thanks to years of media reporting on the so-called “porn addiction epidemic” and the “dangers of cybersex”, there are countless people across the western world who consider themselves sex addicts.

Men who can only get an erection while watching porn. Women with a fetish they obsessively watch online. People who engage in cybersex so often they've lost all interest in sex with their significant other. And in his 27 years as a sex therapist, Doug Braun Harvey has seen them all.

That said, exactly 0.0% of the people that come to see Mr. Harvey are sex addicts, and that's because, from a rational, scientific perspective, there is no evidence whatsoever that such an addiction exists.

That's why Mr. Harvey, along with thousands of other members of the American Association of Sexuality Educators, Counselors, and Therapists (AASECT), issued a statement in 2016 outright denouncing the diagnoses of sex and porn addiction as pure pseudoscience.

The Birth of an Industry

The very idea of sex addiction never came from doctors, scientists or any kind of research. Rather it originated when a group of Alcoholics Anonymous members got together in 1979 to apply the (now completely debunked) 12-step method of recovery to their issues with pornography, adultery and other largely undefined “unhealthy sexual desires”.

And it was that group, of which not one member had any psychological training, that spawned the hundreds of “sex addiction self-help groups” we have today, including Sex Addicts Anonymous, Sexaholics Anonymous and Porn Addicts Anonymous.

Groups like there are big business, running expensive rehab facilities catering to people who feel their sexual behavior is out of control, and to those who force their children and spouses to check in so as to save them from the widely reported scourge.

But Harvey and literally thousands of other experts across the United States, Canada, Australia and Western Europe have pointed out that there's nothing in the scientific literature to suggest that these problems—which range from having “too much cybersex” to continuously cheating on partners—can be rationally categorized as an addiction.

"Sex addiction is truly a social phenomenon, not a clinical or medical one," says Dr. David Ley, a clinical psychologist and the author of The Myth of Sex Addiction. "Most people who self-identify as sex addicts do so because they or their spouse read an article or saw a talk show about sex addiction."

The Complete Lack of Evidence

To cite just one example, in a study published in the journal Socioaffective Neuroscience & Psychology, researchers tested the neural response to sexual stimuli in people who self-identified as having issues with sexual compulsions. In previous research of drug addicts' brains, heroin users exhibited a highly increased neural response to pictures associated with heroin compared to neutral images. But in the study of supposed sex addicts, researchers found that their brain activity was indistinguishable from the general population.

The sheer shadiness of the industry doesn't end there. The diagnosis of sex addiction by such organizations often ignores real problems, and that can come at a steep cost to those unfortunate enough to fall prey to them. One study of people in treatment for sex addiction showed that 92% were suffering from a real mental health disorder such as anxiety, depression, or schizophrenia. Yet instead of getting real help with these well understood and treatable disorders, they were participating in completely unscientific therapies to learn how to masturbate less.

"There's absolutely no research showing that sex addiction treatment actually works," Dr. Ley says. "But they serve a purpose—where men who get in trouble for sexual behaviors can 'go away' with the public appearance that they are committed to 'getting better.' Unfortunately, these patients are often deeply exploited, leaving treatment owing many thousands of dollars, and usually still struggling with the real psychiatric or social issues."

Yet in a callous bid to get as many paying patients into their facilities as possible, sex addiction organizations lump together every undesirable sexual behavior under the sun. Like cybersex? You're a sex addict. Masturbate? You're a sex addict. Practice unsafe sex? You're a sex addict. Use Tinder? You're a sex addict. Your spouse feels you exhibit any form of "bad sexual behavior"? Well, that makes you a sex addict too.

In his book, Dr. Ley tells the story of an 18-year-old man who came to him because he was convinced he was addicted to masturbation. "Turned out, he was only masturbating about once a week, but because he'd been taught that any masturbation was immoral and unhealthy and dangerous, he was terrified. He went online and was diagnosed by sex addiction therapists and online group discussions."

Fake News

Yet despite the overwhelming evidence that sex addiction doesn't exist in any meaningful scientific way, and the now years old statement from AASECT and numerous other mental health organizations, mainstream news outlets from CNN to the BBC churn out endless reporting on how widespread the problem is.

Ten minutes of research would reveal that sex addiction is not listed in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM), nor the International Statistical Classification of Diseases and Related Health Problems (ICD)—the two health catalogues every registered medical practitioner in the western world uses as their mental health diagnoses bibles.

Yet the mainstream media continuously and blatantly fabricates stories, willingly perpetuating a lie for cheap titillation, all the while propping up an industry that is destroying people's lives, and providing an easy excuse to people like Harvey Weinstein, who used "sex addiction" as a way to explain why the crimes he was charged with, including rape, were not his fault.

"So called sex addicts don't actually have more sex, they typically just feel worse about it," says Dr. Ley. "In addition to these religious conflicts, sex addiction is also a label used to excuse the misbehavior of wealthy powerful men, and is used to pathologize the sexuality of gay and bisexual men. All of this reveals clearly that sex addiction is a social construct, serving social functions around sexual control, not a medical or scientific one."

But despite (or maybe because of) the widespread predations of the sex addiction industry, our tiny publication will likely be the only place you ever read any of this. And that, in my opinion, is both sad and terrifying. ❤️

How To Have a Threesome

Threesomes can be tricky. Here's how to get the most out of yours.

By Brianne

If you've made the joint decision to invite a third person into sexual relations with your steady partner, or have arranged a get-together with a couple of lovers for a friends-with-benefits ménage à trois, you might think the hardest part is over. But, making sure everyone has a good time - and a nice orgasm - can be more complex than it seems.

Threesomes can be challenging for any number of reasons, including skill imbalance, asymmetrical chemistry, and the dominance of one personality over another. Getting two people to sexually align is hard enough at times, and adding a third doesn't make it any easier.

Fortunately, as a person whose had numerous great (and mediocre, and downright awful) threesomes, I have some tips to help you make your experience the one you've been fantasizing about when you imagine a threesome.

Tip #1: Everyone Should Be Excited and Comfortable

To begin with, it's always best if everyone is connecting with both partners somewhat equally, and that everyone is into doing it. The last thing you want is one person being ambivalent to another, or for someone to join in because they felt guilty or pressured into it.

Most people wouldn't care to have sex with someone they don't care about or flat out don't like, and when you're having a threesome, it's important to remember that you're having sex with both of your partners, even if you're not directly interacting.

That means, in the case of two straight men with a woman, it's important that the two guys like each other, and that both are happy to share her. If not, the threesome can get very awkward very quickly, especially for the female who may be, quite literally, stuck in the middle.

To avoid this kind of situation, it's best that you precede the threesome with a casual, non-sexual date in which you all just hang out together. That way you can get a feel for the chemistry you have, both sexually and emotionally. If you're getting irritated by a person while you're sitting around talking about movies, then they're probably not a great candidate when it comes to sharing your bed.

Tip #2: Set Boundaries.

When attending any kind of sex party, orgy, or swinging event, it's important to discuss and create boundaries between you and your significant other before you actually have sex, and a threesome is no different.

A guy might not care for a threesome partner calling his girlfriend a slut in the midst of play, or a girlfriend might not want another woman kissing her man. A person might not be into rough play, anal sex, or having someone cum on their face. And these are all important things to know.

Tip #3: Keep Communication Going

Communication, including the right to withdraw consent to the threesome, should not stop just because sex has begun. Both before and during sex, everyone should be comfortable, so it's important to speak up.

For example: Perhaps, prior to the threesome, you agreed that your partner could penetrate the third person with a strap-on, but, now that it's happening, you find it's really, really turning you off. It should be okay to say, "Hey, can we slow this down for a minute?" without anyone getting upset.

If any of the three want things to stop, then they should immediately stop. Remember, communicating well means periodically checking in with everyone, and being a respectful listener. Don't cut off anyone when they're expressing their feelings, and be receptive to feedback.

Tip #4: But a Leash on the Green Eyed Monster.

For better or for worse, having a threesome with anyone you really care about is going to teach you a lot about how you experience sexual jealousy.

Maybe you'll be fine with watching your boyfriend fuck the brains out of one of your best friends, or your girlfriend eagerly sucking your buddy's cock. But, it's also possible that it's going to make you feel angry, fearful, or even miserable.

One of the best ways to control jealousy is to remember that this is play. This sex is purely recreational, and isn't about the forming of, or changing of, relationships. This is supposed to be fun, and when it's over, there's zero obligation or even reason for it to ever happen again, unless you all want it to. So relax and enjoy!

Tip #5: Enjoy Your Partners' Pleasure

It may sound counterintuitive, but, for some people, watching your partner with another person can be as hot as the sex itself. I absolutely adore watching my boyfriend fucking other women, and will sometimes just sit back for a moment and bathe in their sexual radiance. Once, in fact, I actually orgasmed simply by watching my boyfriend push my best friend to her knees and spurting his load all over her face. Even now the memory makes me squirm with arousal.

For men, this fetish is known as cuckolding, and, unfortunately, the term has been bastardized in recent years to cuck, meaning a weak or spineless male. But, as a woman, I can tell you that there's absolutely nothing weak about a guy with the confidence to share his lover with a friend. I'm not saying that everyone should be into just any kink, but running it down so vehemently seems to indicate a lot of insecurity.

My point is this: If you're anything like me, you can derive huge amounts of excitement and pleasure from just watching your partner with another person. And, the last thing you should be doing is sabotaging yourself by listening to those who are small-minded, emotionally insecure, or just plain jealous of your threesome.

Tip #6: Try and Please Everyone

As I mentioned earlier, when you're having a threesome, you don't have one lover; you have two. And, even if you're never going to caress, kiss, or fuck one of those people, you need to care about their pleasure, and should want to help get them off.

For example, my boyfriend is straight, but he knows that his best friend loves name-calling during sex. So, when we've had our threesomes, he's gotten my permission to say things like "alright, let's fuck this dirty little slut", or "look how much this whore loves your cock". We all love it, because it adds to everyone's excitement.

The more attention to pay to your partners' pleasure, the better the time you're all going to have.

Tip #7: Practice Aftercare

What do you do after sex has ended and everyone has (hopefully) enjoyed a wonderful orgasm or two? My suggestion is to spend at least a little while hanging out with everyone, especially if you're part of a couple and you've just enjoyed a third. Chatting and relaxing together after the fun lets them know that they're not just your "plaything", and that you genuinely care about them as a friend.

That said, once your third has left, it's very, very, very important to then snuggle up with your boyfriend or girlfriend and let them know how much you love and appreciate them.

Once, out of a combination of being tired and just plain inconsiderate, I failed to do this, heading off to bed at the same time as our third did. The next day my boyfriend didn't log on to 3DX. Nor the next. And, there were no answers to my messages on Discord. I was in a near panic when he finally resurfaced, and I felt as low as dirt when he quietly told me just how much it had hurt for me to make time for our third, and then disappear without so much as giving him a kiss goodnight.

That incident very nearly ended our relationship, put a strain on my boyfriend's relationship with one of his closest friends, and robbed us all of a lot of happy times. It was many months before my boyfriend suggested we have another threesome, and I sure as hell wasn't going to bring it up.

So learn from my mistake, and always make sure that both your lovers know how much you appreciate and care about them. Otherwise, your next threesome might turn out far, far worse than you'd ever imagined.

One Last Word

Having a threesome is like going skydiving; it can be one of the most fun and exhilarating experiences you'll ever have if you go in with the right mindset and preparation—and it can be one of the worst experiences of your life if you're reckless.

So, take these steps seriously. Follow them religiously. And, I promise you, your sex life will blossom like never before. ♥ Coming in January...

- Sweet's Guide to 3D Erotic Artists
- Miss January: IamTrouble
- Sex Robots - The Future of Artificial Intelligence?
- The Who's Who of 3DX
- Slaying the Green Eyed Monster
- Builder Profile: Cicely
- The Tao of 3DX
- Escort of the Month: Resi
- The Joys of Being a Stupid, Worthless Fuckpig
- The 3DX Celibate

Special thanks to all the people who made this month's issue of Cybersex possible: DianaPrincessX, AmyTrubblemaker, Brianne, LadyAlexa, PansexualPixie, Kemistry, Flora, Scarlett, Stella, Player1, GustavoLafica, and our amazing new editor (and Opal Star Model), CrimsonMandy.

HAVE A SAFE AND HAPPY CHRISTMAS & HANUKKAH!